

Prices for cable and DSL access are higher in USA than anywhere else in the world, despite the size of our market and the fact that the technology was invented here. Having an unregulated duopoly (ILEC + cable company) contributes to this. Either regulate the telcos so they provide near-universal access at a reasonable price (say, similar to Canada's) or force them to provide access to CLECs at fair prices.